The fantasin, "Lack," was the subtantial performance, contracting us admirably rich contable with a piquant and vigorout frames. Paganin's "Which Dance" was perfect in its power and purity of the sounds he draws from the violin. He fairly makes it eng. He has acquired a perfect madery of the mechanism of the violin; he knows all the resources. His bowing is vigorous, his sayle broad and ampin, and his felt hand accompilates the most difficult turns without betraying any effort. Still we can hardly say that he possesses the spart of grains. He hacks sensibility and preforms existing a summary of the tiger lily type of beauty, admirably corresponding with the richness of her melodies. Your suggestions in reference to seed corn for the farmer awere timely and we keepe will be headed. The small yellow corn always ripens well, but the Dent corn, especially in a short season, kept to be affected by the frost before it ripens, and frequently gets monity and retree in the crib before spring. I saw a can of Dent Corn yesterday constanting some six or eight hundred bushels, and there was suggesty a sound ear in it. The yellow corn was hard and sound. Now, this will be a short season, and what corn is planted should be such as will ripen in the least possible time.

While farmers, as well as every other class of men, will rever to economics this year, we do not believe starvation stares us in the face, or that bankruptcy is the inexitable lot of all. There is not a large quantity of old wheat among the farmers, but what they have is of very fair quality, and will be coming forward soon; as the merchants have been walting patiently for their pay for goods sold last season. On the whole, it does not look so "thlue" in this vicinity as the tone of the newspapers would indicate. Our stock brings a good price and we are making arrangements to send forward for the prostible. wet to plant corn.

AN EXCITING RE-ONION.—Some four of five mont, be ago, a worthy citizen of this county marrie du bioming widow (?) of Peoria, and brought her home is triumph, evidently proud of his barrom bride. The "happy pair" got along finely, with so clouds to obecure the annotation of the happy brides, when "a gentleman connected with the army," suddenly spops well in the peaceful habitation of the happy bridegroom, and claimed the bride as "his own," by a prior right. Quite a "scene," in the true cavaller style, before the lady, and taking a dirk from his pocket, swore that he would put un end to his earthly existence unless she would go with him. He held the dirk with fibe point in the region where the thinformed in anatomy locate the heart, and threatend welf-festruction. The husband, half in fun and half in earnest, gave the elbow of the half-distracted soldier a gentle jog, which camed the point of the darger to penetrate his flesh, slightly, whereapon he screamed lustily and called for bandages, which were provided and the would resent and her truth under the other, loaded both into a buggy and piled whip for Wyanot.
